

PRESS Release – for immediate release

These Three Words - Feature length documentary film about Love, Hope & Survival of those whose heart and soul are changed from a life threatening disease

CONTACT: Paul A. Roselli • proseli@cox.net (401) 447-1560: Claire Bullimore • clairelonl@hotmail.com

Noted filmmaker & recording artist to appear on Croydon Radio, UK with radio host Claire Bullimore

Croydon Radio in association with Auntie M's Brain Tumor Network, Brain Tumour Thursday and These Three Words, LLC are very excited to announce an upcoming online radio interview on Brain Tumour Thursday, on croydonradio.com and a special reception following the show.

Claire Bullimore, Brain Tumour Thursday radio host will interview award winning filmmaker Paul A. Roselli – producer/director for the film These Three Words and Ace Diamond, brain cancer survivor, ASCAP affiliated recording artist and motivational speaker, both from the United States, on Thursday, August 8th, 2013 from (12:00 - 14:00 GMT) 7am to 9am EDT. Tune in to listen at www.croydonradio.com.

After the radio interview, join Claire, Ace and Paul at a very special reception, a trailer from the film, and perhaps a very special guest, all at London's famous Matthews Yard from 14:30 - 18:00.

Paul and Ace are in England, along with associate producer Theresa Hillman, to work on the film in part to interview Dr. Malcolm Stevens of Silverdale, UK. Stevens was the researcher who helped develop the now widely used drug Temodar – one of the few drugs available to fight certain types of brain cancer. The timely release of the drug Temodar was crucial in saving Ace's life. In the 30 years since the drug was developed, Dr. Stevens has never met a patient who survived cancer as a result of taking the drug he helped create. This historic meeting with Ace and Dr. Stevens will be captured and become part of the These Three Words film.

After the radio interview and reception that follows, the three will then travel to Kristiansand, Norway to record one of the film's tracks at worldwide famed audio production company Beats in the Bank studios with neo-soul, international singer/songwriter artist Rebekka B. Maeland.

Ace, Paul and Theresa would love to meet other people who are going through their own brain tumor journey, family and friends that support and love those afflicted, and the creative talented songwriters and musicians that keep us all alive with hope.

For more information about the film, the interview and the reception on August 8, please go to Facebook and find Auntie M's Brain Tumour Support, the film These Three Words, or the Facebook page for Claire Bullimore or Paul A. Roselli.

We hope to see you at Matthews Yard.
##End

Background

The Executive Producer and Director – Paul A. Roselli, is in England to talk about the film called 'These Three Words'. The film features and follows 5 individuals in various stages of the disease: those recently diagnosed; those who are under treatment; those whose only option is a clinical trial; and, Ace Diamond who survived brain cancer.

Interviews with doctors and researchers from Rhode Island, Los Angeles, San Francisco, researchers from John Hopkins, UCLA, Rhode Island Hospital and England, with technical support and help from the Rhode Island Brain and Spine Tumor Foundation, true to life stories of cancer survivors from around the US and beyond and their families provide a compelling story of hope, love, survival and life again. Original music and a musical score from brain cancer survivor Ace Diamond will be featured in the film.

These Three Words, “You have cancer,” is a phrase heard daily by many all over the world. It is their universal cry that creates the need for research and testing to find a cure for diseases that few of us know and know well. How much do we really know about neurological diseases and cancers? Brain tumors...strokes...seizure, and other neurological trauma are words that most of us don't know at all. Why do certain areas of the world have a higher than normal number of brain cancer tumors? Why are those with lesser quality health insurance die at rates higher than those with better health insurance? Many who have brain cancer and brain tumors cling to the possibility of a cure. But it is just that: a possibility ripe with hope and laced with the fear of failure. Ace Diamond (Andrew Reis) survived brain cancer. Andrew had glioblastoma. Andrew survived only by chance. Call it a perfect storm of years of research nearing its end, a clinical trial that came about just at the right time and a doctor who knew the latest research and was keen on saving this young man's life. It was also a perfect storm of doctors, practitioners' and more who read the research and knew what to do precisely at the time it needed to be done.

This feature length documentary film and social media approach is about Andrew's story, and the story of others as lucky and not so lucky. Andrew is a story of hope, the research that made it possible, his near death experience and his life again as an answer to hope. The documentary film, book, music video and social media approach will include testimony from experts who helped save Andrew's life, interviews with family and friends and interviews with those working on cutting edge research. The story will also be told through Andrew's music and through his recovery.

These Three Words is also a story of the millions of people worldwide that have to deal with the aftermath of a diagnosis: the fear of the unknown, the hope of clinical trials and working through the all too confusing insurance industry. These Three Words is an answer to hope.

For more information about the film, contact Paul A. Roselli.

The Birds of Paradise art work comes from noted artist Carol Scavotto. Here is some information that comes directly from Carol...

"My floral work mimics the intertwining movements of life. I find a hypnotic similarity in the sensual fluid lines of the body with the swaying rhythmic movements of plant life.

My broader Artistic statement is on my site.

Artist-Carolscavotto..is my professional FB page.....if is a page that must be LIKED to be viewed."

Please go to <https://www.facebook.com/carol.scavotto> and like Carol's facebook page.
<https://www.facebook.com/Casannna>